The impact of the servicemen leaving a small, isolated and close knit community will be researched, and oral histories conducted to learn about the experience of living on North Stradbroke Island during the war years. Outcomes for the Stradbroke 100 project will include creating an archive of historical material, the digitisation of "at-risk" material, an exhibition, a publication and the development of educational programs for visiting schools and groups. Stradbroke 100 content will be included in a Queensland Museum exhibition.

Organisation name	Cherbourg Historical Precinct Group Inc
Project title	The Boys from Barambah: Cherbourg's ANZACS
Project description	It is little-known fact that the streets of the Aboriginal town of Cherbourg are named after the local men who fought in the First World War. Twenty-nine men from Barambah, as the settlement was then called, enlisted to fight. Although the Defence Act, 1909 banned non-Europeans from serving, some men were deemed 'white enough' or recruiting officers turned a blind eye, so long as a man was willing to put his life on the line, as these men certainly were. This project will uncover the hidden history of Queensland's Black Diggers, ensuring their rightful place in the Anzac Centenary commemorations. The project will bring to light the men's individual stories, with multiple outcomes: an exhibition at the Ration Shed Museum, a commemorative plaque, a family reunion, an educational publication for schools and an online film.

Organisation name	Lions Club of Lowood Incorporated
Project title	Coominya Soldier Settler Commemoration
Project description	Properties surrounding the Coominya township in the Brisbane River valley were subdivided into over 100 30-acre blocks and allocated to discharged servicemen from the British and Australian Armies following WW1. Legislation was passed in 1917 and the first recruits signed up in 1920. They were paid to clear the land and were provided with a house, ploughing equipment and fruit trees and grape vines. When the scheme closed in 1929, only 2 farms were still operating; all the other farmers had walked off or been allocated farms in other areas. This research project will seek to determine who were the ex-servicemen who came to Coominya, what was their war record, which block were they on, where did they go, do their descendents have any memorabilia and photographs of that era, can they be found and would they allow their name to be used on commemorative plaques on the properties and on an commemorative honour board?

Our memorial wall will be made of bricks inscribed with the names of past students who have fought and/or died for our country in WW1. A Lone Pine sapling will be sourced from a descendent tree through our local Legacy office and a WWI timeline will be added to the wall. We will have a dedication to WW1 soldiers in the form of a brass plaque and a rising sun emblem. We feel that having a permanent reminder will personally connect the school community with the past students who fought for their country. With this, they will have a better understanding of the significance of WW1 in Australian history. From the imagery we will create life size cut outs of the soldiers printed in black and white. Over the body of the soldiers, some of the highlights of the soldiers' careers indicating significant battles and medals will be printed. These will be mounted outdoors in the grounds of the Julia Creek RSL in a memorial walk. The exhibition will draw on artefacts and an eye-witness account from the Museum's collection of the Sydney - Emden battle. The story of the contribution of merchant ships and seaman to WW1 will be told. For example, the steamer Southport that escaped from German capture to reach Brisbane and the Burns Philp steamer Matunga captured, after she left Brisbane, by the merchant raider Wolf and the remarkable story of the prisoners. Archival footage from the Australian War Memorial will show the experience at sea supported by never before displayed images of WW1 from our collection.
